Market Review

Global Equity markets ended the month of May largely flat, however, the monthly performance masked the significant volatility during the month with inflation concerns continuing to dominate the narrative. Markets sold off sharply during the earlier part of the month before staging a strong recovery towards the end. Despite the volatility, the MSCI China A ended the month in positive territory with a return of 3.4% (in USD terms). The market buoyed by the governments efforts to cushion economic growth slowdown as well as expectations of Shanghai re-opening.

China Caixin manufacturing bounced back to 48.1 in May but remained in the contractionary territory. Services PMI also remained in the contractionary but improved from 36.2 to 41.4 as restrictions started to ease in Shanghai. The PBoC announced a 15bps cut to the 5 year loan prime rate with the aim to provide some cushion against a weak housing market activity.

Investment Strategy

We have a cautious view on China A equities. The prospect of more policy stimulus may have given a floor to markets but we are yet to see any traction into stronger sentiment. Even if China achieves its 5-5.5% growth target its earnings growth may still not be strong enough to drive any large rebound in equity returns.

Forward earnings growth expectations remain weak but may be stabilizing. The consensus still expects growth will re-accelerate in 2022 with policy stimulus. However real estate weakness and the zero-COVID policy could weigh on the market.

With further sell-off driven by adverse sentiment, especially reflecting significant uncertainties
