Market Review

Global equity markets rose slightly in July, with MSCI All Country World Index up 0.2% in USD terms. Best performing regions were China (+9.3%), Japan (+2.2%) and United Kingdom (+4.3%), while South Korea (-17.9%), Taiwan (-5.3%) and Netherlands (-11.2%) were the largest detractors. From a sector perspective, the best performing sectors were Financials (+6.5%), Energy (+12.4%), and Consumer Discretionary (+3.2%), while worst performing sectors were Information Technology (-5.5%), Industrials (-1.4%), and Utilities (-1.1%).

In the US, the Federal Reserve kept the federal funds target range unchanged in July, noting that economic activity was expanding at a solid pace, while inflation remained elevated and uncertainty related to the conflict in the Middle East persisted. The latest official data showed that real GDP grew at an annualised rate of 1.5% in 2Q26, while the labour market softened slightly in July: non-farm payroll employment fell by 23,000 and the unemployment rate was 4.1%. Market has grown increasingly concerned on the risks from rising capital expenditures in the technology sector.

In the euro area, economic activity improved in 2Q26, with GDP increasing by 0.4% quarter on quarter and 1.0% year on year. However, inflationary pressures remained a concern: flash headline harmonised index of consumer prices (HICP) rose to 2.9% year on year in July from 2.8% in June, while energy inflation increased to 10.0% from 8.5%. The ECB kept its three key interest rates unchanged at its July meeting. The ECB continued to view uncertainty due to the uncertain duration and wider effects of the energy shock.

China's equity market performed strongly in July, despite mixed domestic indicators. The official manufacturing PMI fell to 49.2 in July from 50.3 in June, indicating a return to contraction, while CPI rose 0.5% year on year. Fiscal and policy support remained an important market focus.

Investment Strategy

We are positive on global equities on a 12-month basis. While financial markets are adjusting to narrower sources of alpha, tighter 'excess liquidity' for investing, and increasingly narrow market leadership, we continue to find compelling stories from our investment themes, such as the AI diffusion, disruption, and policy beneficiaries. The adoption of AI is proliferating across industries, resulting in supply bottlenecks and creating investment opportunities.

The surge in computing demand for AI is creating manufacturing bottlenecks, from which companies are benefiting through strong earnings growth. However, we are also mindful that not all companies will be able to sustain strong returns. We are finding selected opportunities in technology, financials, industrials, healthcare, defence, and basic materials sectors.

In the US, we believe capital investments in the industrial and manufacturing sectors should benefit leading companies with strong market positions. We also see robust productivity and income growth, as well as positive wealth effects supporting consumption.

In Asia, we remain positive on leading suppliers along the manufacturing supply chain. We also expect China to continue investing in technology and AI, as it is determined to achieve AI self-sufficiency. China's renewable energy solutions could also benefit from higher demand, given the geopolitical uncertainties.
